

Çanakkale Ceramics Museum

Traditional Çanakkale Ceramics, From Past to the Present & Future Generations

Övgü Gökdağ (Çanakkale Seramics Museum Coordinator)

Museum, Traditional Çanakkale Ceramics, Art as a Cultural Heritage, City of Ceramics, Contemporary Ceramics

Museum; Canakkale Fortress' Command Headquarters Soldier's Bath buildings are registred historic buildings which has been built at 1904. Property is belonging to the Treasury of Finance but assigned for the use of Canakkale Hellespont Commands Headquarters that assigns protocol for the right of the use from Municipality of Çanakkale, and so the building is restorated by Municipality to be used as Canakkale Ceramics Museum.

Traditional Canakkale Ceramics; Canakkale, from past to present, has been an important center for original and unique shaped ceramics production. Forms and patterns used in the production carries city life to the art forms. The the mobility of the city & the transitions from Dardanelles is also reflected as ceramics. The city's indigenous architecture,sail boats in the Dardanelles & diversity of plants and animals stylized with exquisite brush strokes and shaped by potters' fingers.

Art as a Cultural Heritage; Ceramics gives its name to the city as a result of more than 300 years of production process history .Canakkale Ceramics Museum is not a only a Museum of objects but rather reflecting the city's cultural heritage as a story.

City of Ceramics; Traditional Canakkale Ceramics having a special place as folk art in art history literature. Çanakkale Ceramics Mueum is supporting the vision the city of ceramics as becoming a very effective communication channel by all means & this availability brings national & international recognition to the local cultural heritage.

Contemporary Ceramics; Museum has 2 halls for modern art exhibitions . In the main building , Museum hosts recognized ceramic artists' work as long term exhibitions. In the garden, Museum has another hall called Camekan for interdisciplinart art works exhibitions. Also, Museum is hosting panel discussions, presentations, workshops & other art activities.