

Neville Assad-Salha (Australia)

Neville Assad-Salha has been working with clay over a forty-five-year period. He studied at the South Australian School of Art then ran his own studio in the Barossa Valley before going on to working in many leading Universities and Art Schools throughout Melbourne, Victoria and Adelaide, South Australia.

During his widely accomplished career, he has headed departments at the Meat Market Craft Centre, The Victoria College of the Arts, the Jam Factory Contemporary Craft and Design Centre and also the Adelaide College of Arts, as well as being a Research Fellow at the University of South Australia.

Neville currently shares his time between his role as a Professor of Fine Arts in Lebanon and his home in the Barossa Valley, Australia.

Neville's works are in many private collections and also in State Galleries in Australia.

He has been commissioned for many pieces of work including the Sydney Opera House.